

Temple Beth El Bulletin

Volume 53 Issue 6 (bi-monthly) November-December 2026 Cheshvan/Kislev/Tevet 5787

I want to invite you to help us build a more connected Temple Beth El, one Shabbat table at a time.

The Shabbat table is a place where acquaintances become friends, and friends become family. We have time to hear what's happening in one another's lives, share traditions, and learn from each other. And when we gather regularly, we get to know one another more deeply. Those relationships can make TBE feel smaller and more personal and bring new meaning to the way we celebrate Shabbat.

That's why I'm thrilled to announce that this winter, we will be launching Gatherings, a new initiative that will bring people together in small groups for regular Shabbat meals – helping people connect with fellow congregants, strengthening existing friendships and building many new ones.

Here's how Gatherings will work. You'll complete a short questionnaire, telling us about your household, your interests, and the kind of group and Shabbat experience you would enjoy. We'll use that information to form compatible groups, considering life stage, geography, dietary needs, transportation, and hosting ability. You can request to be grouped with certain people – though we hope you'll also be open to making new connections.

Your group will coordinate a regular schedule of Shabbat meals, usually in one another's homes, with members sharing responsibility for hosting and planning. Friday night dinner will be a natural choice for many, but Shabbat lunch may work better for others. Groups will be small enough for conversation and connection, with the final size of each group depending on who registers – and the magic of matchmaking. Each group will be free to make a schedule that works for its members.

Gatherings is open to every age and stage: singles and couples, families with children, and those who would prefer an adults-only group. You can tell us whether you'd enjoy people at a similar stage of life or a mix of ages and households. Longtime members, newcomers,

A NIGHT OF LIGHTS

Broadway and Beyond: Songs of Hope, Courage, and Joy

I am so excited to invite our Temple Beth El community to this year's Norma and Milton Mann Memorial Cantor's Concert, A Night of Lights, Broadway and Beyond: Songs of Hope, Courage, and Joy. This concert is an opportunity to come together through the power of music, to lift our spirits, and to bring light into a season that can sometimes feel dark and uncertain.

As we gather to welcome and celebrate Hanukkah, the Festival of Lights, I will begin the evening by lighting the menorah, reminding us of the enduring power of light to illuminate even the darkest moments. One of Hanukkah's miracles is that a little bit of oil lasted eight days and nights, and I believe that the power of music is similarly miraculous. Music has the ability to sustain us, inspire us, and connect us, while serving as a beautiful reminder of the extraordinary capacity of our shared human existence.

Through songs drawn from the Broadway stage and beyond, we will explore themes of hope, courage, and joy. From beloved musical theater favorites to other inspiring selections, this program will celebrate the resilience of the human spirit and the ways music helps us find strength, meaning, and connection. I am thrilled to share the stage with special guests Cantor Micah Morgovsky of Temple Sinai, Leo Linder, TBE's own and Broadway star Bill Nabel, and my son, Ethan Kaplan, accompanied by the wonderful pianist Barbara Orwick. Bringing together these talented performers for an evening of music and community is especially meaningful to me, and I cannot wait to share this experience with all of you.

This year's concert will also have a fresh and intimate atmosphere. We will transform the back of our Social Hall, with the stage and round tables creating a cabaret-style setting that invites us to settle in, enjoy the music, and experience the evening together in a warm and

On One Foot
Voting Is Praying with our Legs

Prayer crosses the aisle, but it's manifested in different ways. "I believe in the power of prayer," said Amy Coney Barrett at her confirmation hearing in 2020. James Talarico, a Democratic candidate for Senate, said virtually the same thing back in 2023, in a Texas legislative debate over gun laws: "I believe in the power of prayer. I believe prayer changes lives. I believe prayer changes the world. But there is something profoundly cynical about asking God to solve a problem that we're not willing to solve ourselves."

Prayer, then, needs to be seen as an active form of expression.

When Rabbi Abraham Joshua Heschel returned from marching for Civil Rights in 1965, he wrote (and here's the full quote):

"For many of us the march from Selma to Montgomery was about protest and prayer. Legs are not lips and walking is not kneeling. And yet our legs uttered songs. Even without words, our march was worship. I felt my legs were praying."

We pray with our commitments, and we pray with our ballots. As I prepare to vote, I say a prayer, grateful to have lived to reach this moment, grateful for the freedom to vote, and aware of my obligation to fulfill the commandment (mitzvah) of saving lives and building a better world. It's a sacred moment, voting, a moment of pure prayer: a taste of the heavenly Jerusalem in a mundane school gym. This ballot box is our Western Wall, a note inserted into its crevice, a dispatch from the front, an epistle from the heart, containing my deepest response to the Cry of our times, a Cry that demands action - action that we can all take, that all of us must take. The fate of the nation will be determined in parking garages and school gyms and libraries, by long lines of voters waiting 3,5,8 hours or more to do something so simple, yet so earthshaking. It's all worthy of a blessing.

At times like these, it's important, for Jews and others, to remember that voting is a prime spiritual value - a Jewish value - expressing our deep belief in the power that we possess to change the world.

We never hear about the rabbis of the Talmud taking a poll of their constituents. And Moses certainly didn't take a vote before leading the people out of slavery. Still, the democratic value inherent to voting does find expression in Jewish tradition.

Jews were deeply involved in both the women's suffrage movement of the 1920s and in the civil rights struggle of the 1960s, which, among other accomplishments, achieved the extension of the right to vote to African Americans. Some early Jewish voting-rights advocates included Clara Lemlich who, in 1909, following the Triangle Shirtwaist Factory Fire, organized one of the most important strikes in American history and who then turned her energies to creating a working-class women's suffrage organization; and Gertrude Weil, a leader of the North Carolina Equal Suffrage League beginning in 1915 and a crusader for voting rights and election reform.

Yes, the ballot box is our Kotel, a note inserted into its crevice, a dispatch from the front, an epistle from the heart, containing

BETH EL

Kesher ("connection") Beth El is a PreK through 7th grade learning community serving the Conservative Jewish community of Stamford, Norwalk, and the surrounding towns. Classes meet in-person on Sunday mornings, with one-on-one Hebrew lessons via Zoom on Thursdays for older students.

You can see photos from the school year HERE, and check out the calendar for the year at tinyurl.com/kesher26-27.

A year when the holidays are all on the weekends can feel like such a mixed blessing. On the one hand, it might feel more possible for kids and families to try out services on holidays when they might otherwise have to be at school or work. On the other hand, we don't get to gather as a school and begin our learning for quite a long time. This year, the holidays were enriched by tons of opportunities to come together as a community, with new experiences for kids throughout. Students got to blow shofar in the main services on day two of Rosh Hashanah as part of some brand new family programming, decorate the sukkah to withstand a storm, and celebrate the Torah with song and dance on Simchat Torah. It was a full season even without our usual Sunday morning Kesher classes! And of course, we got to kick it all off with the Back to Shul event, where students got to do fun (and delicious) activities with their teachers and get excited for the year. After all that warm-up, we're all ready for Kesher to start!

and people exploring a connection to TBE are all welcome.

Hosting can be simple: a potluck, takeout, or a favorite family recipe. If your culinary repertoire begins and ends with ordering pizza, you are still very welcome! And if your home isn't suitable for hosting, that should not keep you from participating. Tell us on the registration form, and we'll take it into account when forming groups.

Whether Shabbat dinner is already part of your routine or you are trying it for the first time, there is room for you. We'll provide blessings, songs, and conversation prompts, and take different approaches to Shabbat observance and kashrut into account when matching groups. Some groups may enjoy attending services together before dinner, discussing the weekly Torah portion, or singing around the table. Others may prefer a few blessings and a relaxed meal. Each can discover a way of celebrating Shabbat that feels meaningful for the people in the group.

We each bring different Jewish experiences to the table. Someone might teach a melody their family has sung for years; someone else might ask a question that gets everyone thinking. Sharing those experiences can help us discover traditions we'd like to make our own and give familiar practices fresh meaning.

My hope is that these connections will continue throughout the week. You might find someone to sit with at services, invite over for a holiday, or call just to catch up. Those are the kinds of friendships that help a congregation feel like a community.

Adira and I are also excited to be part of Gatherings. We'll be hosting groups in our home each month, and we're looking forward to sharing Shabbat with more of you around our own table. I am grateful to the volunteers and staff who have been working to bring Gatherings to life. Now we need you.

Please join us for an information session at TBE on Friday, November 6, following a special 6pm Friday evening service. The registration deadline is December 15, and we'll have a kickoff celebration at TBE on Friday, January 29, when participants will get to know their groups and begin making plans together. For registration information or questions, contact Erica Newman at execdir@tbe.org or 203-322-6901, ext. 304.

Adira and I are so excited for Gatherings, and I hope you will be too. We hope you'll join us as we draw on the magic of the Shabbat table to meet new friends, deepen connections, and strengthen the fabric of our community.

Pull up a chair. There is a place for you.

welcoming space. My hope is that it will feel like a special night out—an opportunity to be entertained, moved, and uplifted in the company of friends and our Temple Beth El family.

I am also honored that this concert will recognize Carol and Allen Krim for their many years of service, dedication, and commitment to Temple Beth El. Their contributions have helped strengthen our community, and it is a privilege to celebrate and thank them as part of this special evening.

More than anything, I hope this concert will remind us that even in challenging times, we can choose to bring light into the world. Through music, we can find courage when we need strength, hope when we need reassurance, and joy when we need a reason to smile. I look forward to sharing this evening with you as we celebrate Hanukkah, honor those who have given so much to our community, and experience the healing and illuminating power of music together.

I hope you will join me for A Night of Lights, Broadway and Beyond: Songs of Hope, Courage, and Joy. Let's gather, celebrate, and fill our Temple with light!

my deepest response to the Cry of our times.

The principle "you should go after the majority (Exodus 23:2) is understood by the rabbis to mean that the majority rules in legal disputes. In one famous Talmudic story, a group of rabbis argue over a legal point. Even though a divine voice supports the lone opinion of one rabbi, the majority opinion wins. Once the Torah has been transmitted to the Jewish people, the will of the people—understood as the majority opinion of the decision makers—determines the law. (Talmud Bava Metzia 59b).

So, on November 3, October 27 or whenever you vote, why not say a "Shehechianu" blessing – or make up another, spontaneous utterance that reflects how you feel at such a crucial moment.

In Hebrew, the verb "to pray" is reflexive. We aren't praying so much for God's benefit as for our own. Similarly, we are voting not only to save the world, but to save ourselves. And it would be profoundly cynical to ask God to clear up a mess that we helped to create, and that we aren't willing to roll up our sleeves and help to resolve.

It begins with voting. And when we vote, our body will be praying.

One more thing: If you're in the Boston area on December 4-5, please save the date for Shabbat Hanukkah Celebration honoring my father at Kehillath Israel (KI), 384 Harvard Street, Brookline, "...honoring the enduring legacy of Cantor Michal Hammerman, z'l, and celebrate his 30 years of devoted service to our community and Ever-Widening Circle."

This Shabbat will feature a tributo to Cantor Michal Hammerman; participation by Rabbi Joshua Hammerman and a distinguished panel of scholars and rabbis representing more than 40 rabbinic alumni of KI; Friday evening dinner and Saturday night Hanukkah celebration
